Fundamental processes involved in solar energy conversion:

• Absorption
• Charge separation
• Recombination
• Chemical reactions

We apply computation to understand these processes and design materials with desirable properties.

Researchers in the Levine group learn to apply computational tools to predict the optical and electronic properties of molecules and materials.